

Contributors

Sara Blåka is a PhD student at the Department of Political Science and Management, University of Agder.

Tobias Chilla is Professor of Geography at the University of Erlangen-Nuremberg. His research focus is on European spatial development and applied Geography, including territorial governance and cross-border integration. Most recent research activities have explored the development of the macro-regional strategies, in particular in the Alpine region.

Stefan Gänzle is Associate Professor of Political Science at the Department of Political Science and Management, University of Agder. Previous affiliations include the German Development Institute in Bonn, the University of British Columbia in Vancouver and the University of Jena. He is the co-editor of Macro-regional Europe: Theoretical Approaches and Empirical Evidence (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016).

Dag Ingvar Jacobsen is Professor of Public Administration at the University of Agder, Department of Political Science and Management. He also holds a part-time position as Professor at the University of Tromsø. Dag I. Jacobsen obtained his PhD in Political Science from the University of Tromsø. His main areas of research include public administration, organization studies and local government.

Jörg Mirtl is a Project Manager for the support of macro-regional strategies and innovative cooperation methods at the Interact Programme of the EU in Turku, Finland. He has previously worked in the coordination of the Priority Areas 'Institutional Capacity and Cooperation' (City of Vienna), as well as 'People and Skills' of the EU Strategy for the Danube Region (Ministry of Education, Austria). He holds degrees in Philosophy from the Karl-Franzens University in Graz and in EU Studies from the Centre International de Formation Européenne (CIFE) in Nice and Berlin.

Franziska Sielker, Dipl.-Ing. (spatial planning), is a Newton International Fellow in the Department of Land Economy at the University of Cambridge. She was a scientific collaborator in the Institute of Geography at the University of Erlangen-Nuremberg, where she took her PhD. During her PhD studies, she was a Visiting Scholar at the University of Cambridge. In her dissertation, she analysed macro-regional integration and the subsequent processes of rescaling and reterritorialization in the EU.

Dominic Stead is Associate Professor of Urban and Regional Development at Delft University of Technology. He is regional editor of Planning Practice and Research and member of the editorial boards of the European Journal of Transport and Infrastructure Research, European Planning Studies and Journal of Planning Education and Research.

Anne Elizabeth Stie is the Head of the Department of Political Science and Management, University of Agder. Her main fields of research are European Union integration, democratic theory, and accountability. Recent publication includes Democratic Decision-Making in the EU: Technocracy in Disguise? (Routledge, 2013).

Jarle Trondal is Professor of Public Administration in the Department of Political Science and Management at the University of Agder, Norway, and Professor of European Studies in the ARENA Centre for European Studies at the University of Oslo, Norway. He is also an Honorary Professor at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark. His main fields of research include European public administration, administrative behavior, administrative reform, and organizational studies. Recent articles have appeared in the European Journal of Political Research, European Political Science Review, Governance, Public Administration, West European Politics, and Journal of European Public Policy. Recent books include The Palgrave Handbook on the European Administrative (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015, with Michael W. Bauer) and Governance in Turbulent Times (OUP, 2017, with Chris Ansell and Morten Øgård).

Anchrit Wille is an Associate Professor at Leiden University. She obtained her doctoral degree in Political Science from the University of Amsterdam. Recent books include The Normalization of the European Commission: Politics and Bureaucracy in the EU Executive (OUP, 2013). She has published in West European Politics, International Review of Administrative Sciences, Public Administration, European Sociological Review, Acta Politica, and the Journal of Happiness Studies. Current research projects include executive politics and accountability in the EU's multilevel governance context, political-administrative relationships, institutional dynamics and change, political participation, inequality and democratic governance.

Barbara Zyzak is a PhD student at the Department of Political Science and Management, University of Agder.