

Talk-to-Yu!

I love the smell of a sun-bathed blanket. I hang them outside on sunny days (as do most of my neighbors - we chat while doing so), but I was recently told by the adjacent unit that this wonderful aroma comes from the dead mites killed by ultraviolet rays...

What a macabre truth! Anyhow, I'm gonna go kill some more mites~

WHAT IS HOME?
Is it the place that you stay?
Is it to be with the person you love?
Or is it where you do chores?
Hit mangaka Yahan Yu poses these questions and more with this poignant collection of everyday vignettes from within an eighty-story-tall Manhattan hotel.
Almost Home, a tale spun from the fantasy and reality of Yahan Yu!

CHAPTER 1. LAUNDRY MASTER

WHEN I'M NOT WORKING, I TRY TO WRITE AND LOOK FOR FREELANCE WRITING GIGS IN MY ROOM...

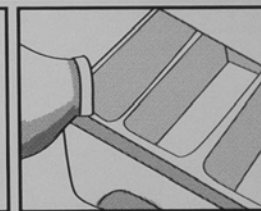

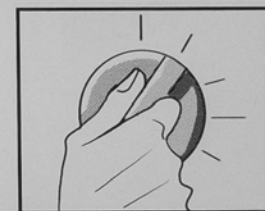

SO I WORK PART-TIME AT THE SPECIALTY RESTAURANT ON THE SEVENTIETH FLOOR, EVERY FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

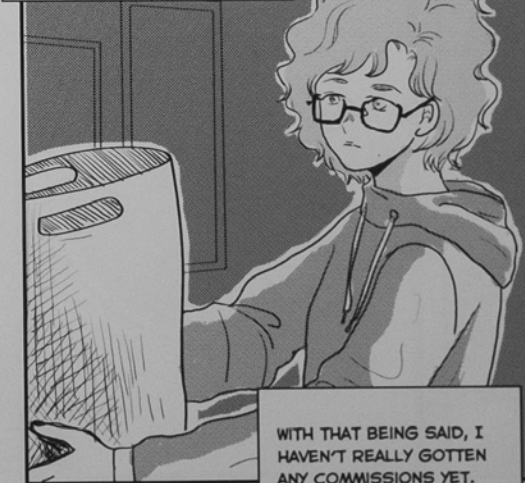

THE VIEW FROM MY BED IS QUITE NICE. IT STRIKES ME WITH THE REALIZATION THAT I AM ACTUALLY IN NEW YORK CITY.

ON THE FORTY-SIXTH FLOOR OF THE METROPOLITAN IS "ALMOST HOME", A RESIDENTIAL HOTEL THAT WELCOMES LONG-TERM GUESTS.

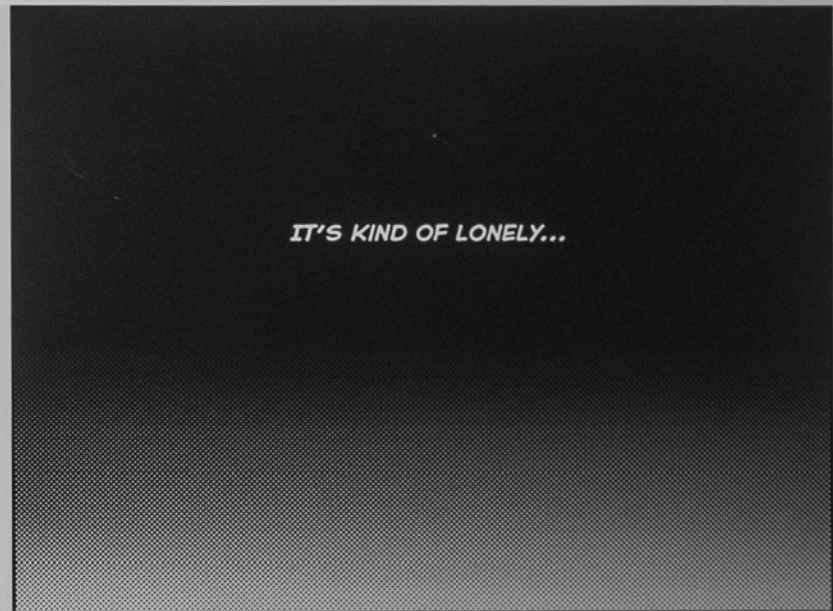

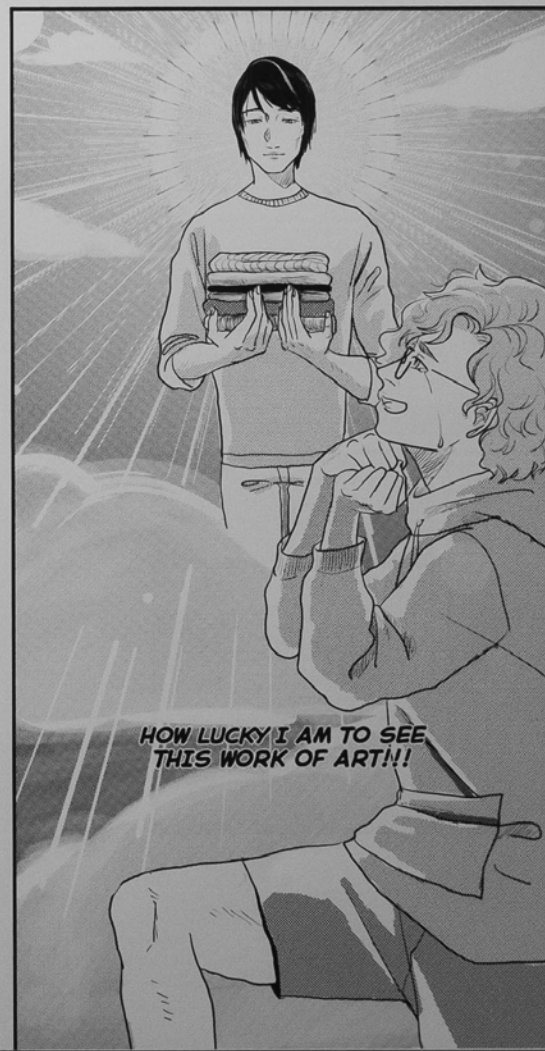

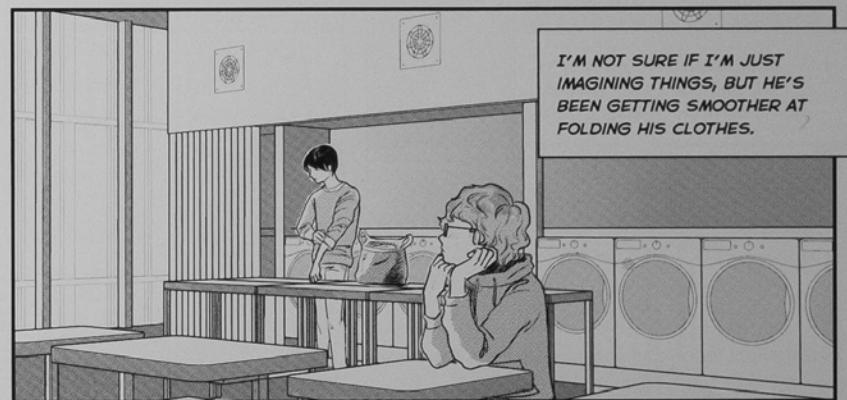

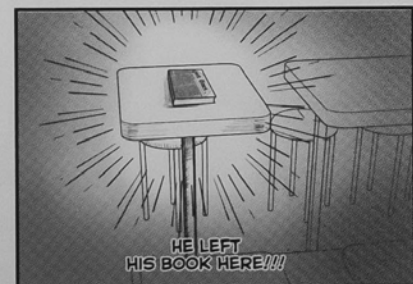

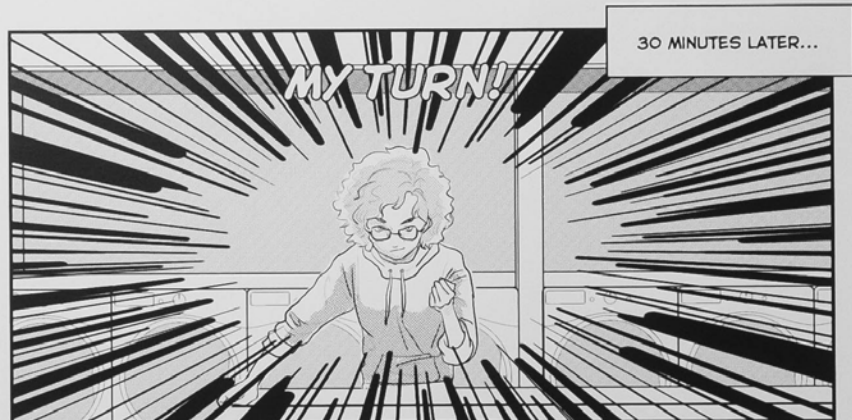

MY NAME IS ALICE. I JUST MOVED TO NYC THREE WEEKS AGO TO PURSUE MY CAREER AS A SCREENWRITER.

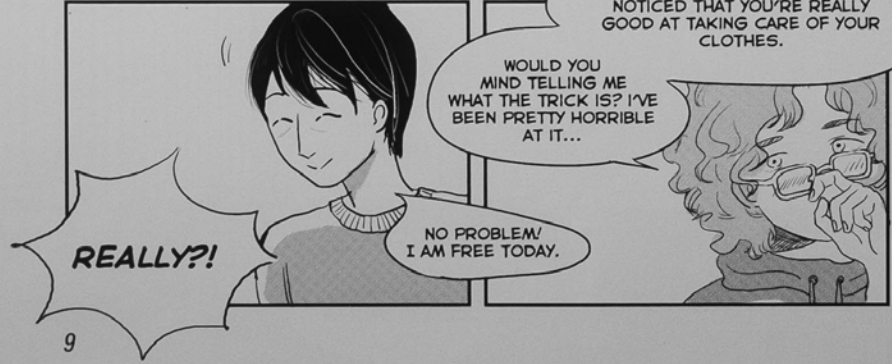

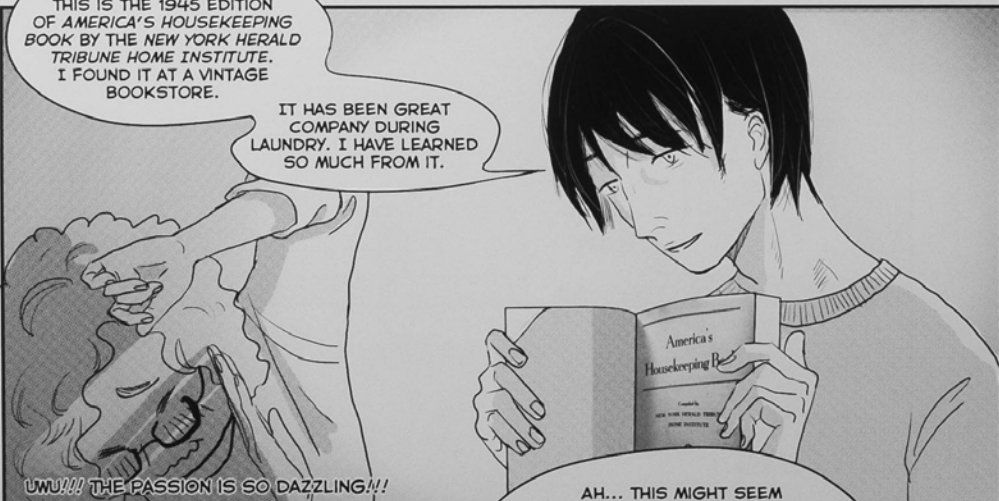

WITH THAT BEING SAID, I HAVEN'T REALLY GOTTEN ANY COMMISSIONS YET.
